VIES WITH LADY ASTOR AS LEADING WOMAN POLITICIAN

Ireland Presents Most Serious Internal Problem Since Revolt of American Colonies.

Lady Violet Bonham-Carter. (Lady Carter is daughter of Mrs. Asquith. She is wife of Lady Astor as the leading woman politician of Great Britain.)

LONDON, June 4.—Ireland today presents the most serious internal problem which our country has had to face since the revolt of the American colonies. It is a political problem, and it is a political problem which the present government, like their predecessors nearly 150 years ago, are making the mistake of attempting to solve it by force. What the result is I shall attempt to show in part at least, by a few instances of which I was able to get direct evidence during a recent visit to Ireland in the belief that if the English people were to understand what was being done in their name, they would not be so ready to support it to an extent as unworthy of their traditions and of the ideals for which they have fought.

But I assert that no provision of the constitution of this country can be enforced by law by prime and order by force. Above all, I believe that our present government in Ireland are far from being English and Irish, but are a mixture of the two, and that the only way to solve the problem is to have a government which is both English and Irish.

Wine Is Poison After Anti-Typhoid Serum

PARIS, June 4.—Wine taken too soon after injection of anti-typhoid serum has caused the death of several dozen recruits of the French 102d class, according to charges made by the Paris weekly L'Echo.

Doctors failed to warn the soldiers, says the paper, that alcohol taken within forty-eight hours of inoculation became deadly poison.

POVERTY CAUSES OBLITERATION OF CLASS DISTINCTION

Then came the question, how to pay for their meager when they had not the luxury of a proper dinner. It was answered for the day by an ex-convict taking of his boots and beginning to repair them. This man, with his tools and leather, he carried in his pocket.

This was the starting point for a new enterprise. Some other officers did as the captain had done and as that one of the shoemakers were in great demand, and the workers a great on the market, all the inevitable prejudices had to be thrown overboard. A master shoemaker, who had formerly been an ex-convict, was engaged as instructor.

Among the apprentices are staff officers, captains, colonels and even a general, all of them intent upon learning a new trade. They are all of them of the same rank, and they are all of them of the same rank.

FRENCH POLITICAL AFFAIRS DO NOT WORRY CLEMENCEAU

"The Tiger" Declares He Has Not the Slightest Ambition for Any Job From Premier to Gendarme. Spends Time in Library.

By Hudson Hawley. United News Staff Correspondent. PARIS, June 4.—The Tiger is making believe that his teeth have been pulled, and is having the time of his life playing around in the library. Letting "dear old men like Barthou" do the dirty political work.

George Clemenceau, octogenarian old, doesn't give a hoot whether school keeps or not. The rise or fall of new governments and new promises affects him not at all. In general, he is living up to the French national motto, "Je m'en f...".

I went down to St. Rue Franklin, where the Tiger has had his hair for years, to see "old Father Victory." I was admitted without ceremony, and moved in the west in the most French fashion.

But the Tiger returned in the most abrupt of English, "I'm doing nothing, I'm not being interviewed, I'm not answering any questions."

How about writing that you are a regular attendant at the Public Library? I asked him. He laughed and retorted, "I haven't been there in years. Nor to the comedy Francaise, either. I go just once in a while to hear the music somewhere."

Say Former Soldier's Shape Now Like Letter 'S'

LONDON, June 4.—The tallers say that the former soldier is looking like a letter 'S'. His chest which in wartime was where a soldier's chest ought to be, has now slipped down to where it ought not to be, and the waist measurement has developed extensively.

The result is that the beautiful figure of the man of 1919 has become rare and fatness and baldness, say the tallers, have taken the place of thinness and muscle.
